Operation Mountain Relief (Helping Hands & Deep River Farms Hurricane Relief) is a tremendous organization of folks and churches who have come together to help those in need who were heavily impacted by the Hurricane Helene disaster in various ways. I cannot say enough about their efforts and the good works that they are doing to help the cause! Not only are they providing much needed essential supplies and funding, they are also sponsoring individual families who have been displaced by the storm as funding allows. Be sure to check out their website at the link below:

Operation Helo remains dedicated to supporting families in Western North Carolina as they recover from Hurricane Helene. To date, they've provided no less than 182 new campers to displaced families, ensuring they have a safe and temporary place to call home. The Winter Warmth Initiative has been implemented to keep families warm during winter by partnering with local businesses like Blossman Propane to provide propane refills, ensuring no family goes without heat. They are working to provide long-term solutions for rebuilding and strengthening the community. With allocated funding and partnerships with local contractors, they aim to provide building supplies and help with permanent housing for those in need.

Precision Grading

Jake Jarvis (owner of Precision Grading) is serving in a mighty big way, and blessing the people of the region with his good works! Jake is helping the survivors clean-up their devastated properties, re-building access roads and driveways, constructing temporary access bridges, removing timber, construction debris, automobiles and other debris from the banks of the rivers, and performing various other services. Jake is currently matching the donations that he receives with an equal amount of work, this essentially doubles the value of your donations!
